THE PADDLE STEAMER (PS MAHSUD)

100 YEARS HERITAGE

- The century-old heritage paddle steamer PS Mahsud is set to resume operation on the Dhaka–Barishal river route, marking the revival of a historic chapter in Bangladesh's river transport heritage.
- PS Mahsud was built in the late 1920s at the Garden Reach Workshop in Kolkata. Most sources mention it as built in 1928.
- It belonged to a class of vessels often referred to as “rocket steamers,” which plied the rivers of Bengal (then undivided) — connecting ports like Dhaka, Barishal/Khulna, Morelganj — carrying passengers and cargo along the extensive inland waterways.
- Like many steam-powered paddle vessels, PS Mahsud was modernized: its original steam engine was replaced with a diesel engine in 1983, with technical and financial assistance from Belgium.
- Later, in 1995, its propulsion was again upgraded — converting to a mechanical gear system.
- PS Mahsud (and its sister “rocket steamers”) are more than just ships — they are living symbols of Bangladesh’s riverine heritage, representing how rivers once formed the backbone of communication, trade, and transport across the region.
- Its revival signals renewed interest in “river-based tourism” in Bangladesh — combining nostalgia, history, and scenic travel along rivers.
